Our Program:

What does Mental Health look like in the Legal Profession?

This program addresses the role and impact of mental health in the legal profession, including the lawyer's duty of competency, the effect of substance abuse, depression, and anxiety on a lawyer's ethical duties, and how other factors – including generational differences, gender and technology – may exacerbate or mitigate mental health concerns.

The presentation also explores ways that attorneys can take active steps to help address mental health issues, in themselves and others, to make changes before the situation becomes dire and to find more happiness and fulfillment in the profession.
